a million ghosts
of television
images move between and through us and we don't know what they mean

several dozen
children play violin at once
on a public access channel and think they have made it big

a man on Quaaludes
suddenly realizes that he is no longer in the 70s and asks himself
why he is on Quaaludes.

everyone, at any given moment, wants to know why
Ellen DeGeneres is crying.

an intern screws up a news headline.
the headline
reads: “abuse
an animal day”
rather than “abused animal day.”

the implications of either headline are still unclear.

The image consists of three vertical bars of equal height and width, arranged side-by-side. The leftmost bar is red, the middle bar is blue, and the rightmost bar is green. The text 'this will be seen on a computer' is located in the lower-left portion of the red bar.

this will be seen on a computer

it was never intended to be this way

CHANNEL

2.1

Ellen DeGeneres runs television with an unmatched passion and feels very good about herself and then she realizes that her body is syndicated like her show and feels very lonely yet she continues to go to work for Fox and then she realizes she doesn't work for Fox and her loneliness turns to confusion and the story seems to begin and end there and begin again.

4.1

Ellen DeGeneres curls into herself and feels an immense pressure in her chest and is unsure as to what it is but she continues to curl in on herself until she develops a shell.

7.1

Ellen DeGeneres develops a drug transmitted by radio waves and then she remembers that radio waves are not that great.

7.2

Ellen DeGeneres reads the weather for Detroit on 7 minute loops and she feels as though it is performance art so she flails about the studio that she is being filmed in and nothing gets accomplished except the city of Detroit making one resounding sigh 'Oh, Ellen.'

32.1

Ellen DeGeneres is in a Canadian television.

No, like, that's it.

48.1

Ellen DeGeneres doesn't exist in this space but she is in space.

56.1

Ellen DeGeneres begins to take donations for his encouraging and chronically happy behavior and in return gives five seconds of dancing for every donation and she feels bad because it is all very contrived but she does it anyways because she is terminally positive.

62.1

Ellen goes home to her husband after traveling the world of television and smiles as she has fooled the world.

TRANSMITTER, ENCODER

The Voyager
spacecraft returns to Earth after moving through time

with fitful intensity.

The contents of the Voyager spacecraft
are jettisoned and it re-enters the atmosphere and they land in Ellen DeGeneres' lap

HOLY

SHIT

says Ellen

Ellen boards the Voyager spacecraft and engineers a re-launch of the spacecraft with enough room for her to be on it. She takes with her:

A TRANSISTOR
RADIO, A TIVO BOX
AND

several batteries to keep it all going out in space

and AWAY she GOES

Ellen
takes off into space
and is
only thing representing humanity

That lil Tivo box
and that lil radio
and Ellen DeGeneres
and a few batteries

and something else out in space doesn't know what dance is and all they get

is a fragmented radio song and a fragmented program that ruins something but makes it feel pretty good

INFORMER, SOURCE

A radio wave has a very long wavelength like a Wi-Fi connection shooting across the expanses between two people.

A radio wave is just a line that curves up and down and up and down and there is nothing to it.

A radio wave
makes a frown
when it is at its highest and makes a smile at its lowest and that is stupid.

A radio wave, to you and I, is just a line that does nothing but cook us slowly without any basic information exchange.

needs help, a help that none of us can give it.

A radio wave is Ellen DeGeneres
shooting through the air and trying to tell us something but she can't.

A radio wave is
with you and I in the cold lack of what we depend on.

A radio wave
holds you and me close to Ellen and we send it back to where it came from.
